CIRCLE Indonesia

CIRCLE Indonesia (www.circleindonesia.or.id) is a cooperative form of organisation providing consultancy services for the development of human resources, especially in support of civil society empowerment and development. Since its establishment, CIRCLE Indonesia has been working in collaboration with many international organisations and NGOs, including the United Nations Development Program (UNDP), Oxfam International (OI), Oxfam Great Britain (OGB), Caritas Switzerland, Cordaid-Netherlands, Caritas Switzerland, Ford Foundation, VECO Indonesia, Welthunger Hilfe, Save the Children UK, Heifer International Indonesia Office, ICCO-KIA, Catholic Relief Services, Bina Desa – MISEREOR, Action by Churches Together International (ACT International), International Finance Corporation-PENSA-The World Bank, CORDAID-CARDI-World Vision International, Heifer International Indonesia Office, International Labour Organisation Indonesia, Hivos International Asia and Pacific Regional Office, Caritas Indonesia, and World Neighbour.

Drawing from its extensive experience in providing consultancy services to local, national and international NGOs since 2006, CIRCLE Indonesia has developed and organised regular training series, including series of training on Participatory Programme Planning, Monitoring & Evaluation.

The most recent training held CIRCLE Indonesia was the seventh of the series of training on Participatory Programme Planning, Monitoring & Evaluation held during 8-11 October 2013 and was attended by 17 participants (4 female, 13 male). Evaluation of this training indicated that participants were happy and satisfied with the processes and the training for different reasons.

Rondang S.E Siregar from the Research Centre for Climate Change Study of the Indonesia University witnessed that, "I have been exposed to many training experiences abroad... but this training – compared to any other trainings held in Indonesia on development programmes in the context of Indonesia - is by far the best training organised by our fellow Indonesians, in our own country. Many practices and types of projects are existing in Indonesia with the wealth of context in a number of issues, including forestry, poverty, disaster, gender, and advocacy. The training has successfully tapped such wealth and helped me to have strong understanding and learn from the many experience, which will eventually help me to run my programs and works."

Bonnifacio from CRS Timor Leste wrote this in CIRCLE Indonesia fan page one day after the training: "Thank you CIRCLE, who has organised a very fun and resourceful training. Thank you also to my fellow participants, who were so amazingly fun to be with. Good job!"

Programme Planning, Monitoring & Evaluation

Just like a life, a programme has its own cycle as well, from the start it is “planned to be born” until its end. The planning of a programme is usually stated in a commonly called Logical Framework document or the Logframe. A good programme planning is the planning of a programme that is based on analysis of the contextual problems in the community where work will be implemented. From this point, changes that are expected to happen are formulated. A good programme planning is reflected in the hierarchy of logical changes along with appropriate indicators.

Afterwards, a programme has to be monitored and evaluation. Monitoring & Evaluation (M&E) plays a significant role in the lifecycle of a programme as this is where reflections and learning can be drawn for future improvement of the programme implementation. The learning will contribute to increased effectiveness of a project in achieving the expected social changes.

Ideally, Planning, Monitoring & Evaluation is conducted in participatory manner to ensure programme managers and beneficiaries together to be able to make the right decision and that the project runs as planned and to make necessary modifications. Participatory Planning, Monitoring & Evaluation also provides the opportunity for further empowering beneficiaries in monitoring projects in a systematic and comprehensive manner.
